Location

The temple is situated at Thirumalaikodi (or Malaikodi), a southern suburb of Vellore in Tamil Nadu, India. It sits at the foothills of a range of green hills, approximately 8 kilometers from the main Vellore city center.

How to Get There

- By Road: Vellore is extremely well-connected by National Highway 48 (Chennai–Bengaluru). Regular state-run and private buses operate from Chennai (approx. 145 km), Bengaluru (approx. 215 km), and Tirupati (approx. 115 km). Local buses, auto-rickshaws, and taxis are easily available from the Vellore Old and New Bus Stands to Thirumalaikodi (about an 18 km drive).
- By Train: The nearest major railway station is Katpadi Junction (KPD), located about 12 to 15 kilometers away from the temple. It is a vital rail hub connecting major cities across India. A smaller station, Pennathur Halt, is around 7 km away.
- By Air: The closest international airports are Chennai International Airport (MAA) and Bengaluru International Airport (BLR). Tirupati Airport is also roughly 140 km away.

Speciality of this Temple

The crowning glory of Sripuram is that its entire structural pathway and the inner sanctum are covered in pure gold leaf. Over 1,500 kilograms of pure gold were used in its construction—more than double the amount used for the Golden Temple in Amritsar.

Another profound spiritual specialty is its star-shaped layout. To reach the central sanctum, every devotee must walk along a 1.8-kilometer-long path shaped like a six-pointed star (Sri Chakra). This walk is intended to be a slow, meditative journey, lined with displays of spiritual maxims, scriptural truths, and messages of human righteousness (Dharma).

History and Legends

Unlike centuries-old historical monuments, Sripuram is a contemporary marvel. It was conceived, designed, and constructed under the spiritual guidance of Sri Sakthi Amma (also known as Narayani Amma), the head of the Sri Narayani Peedam charitable trust.

The temple was constructed in a remarkably short span of around 7 years by more than 800 gold artisans and traditional silversmiths. It was officially inaugurated and dedicated to the world on August 24, 2007. The spiritual legend behind the location is that Thirumalaikodi has long been considered a sacred ground where sages and saints performed intense penance (tapas) to seek the vision of the Divine Mother.

Architecture

The architectural style is heavily inspired by traditional Dravidian temple design, but scaled with precision engineering.

- The Golden Structure: The gold was manually converted into delicate foils of multiple layers and engraved with intricate traditional motifs.
- Eco-Friendly Setting: The temple complex spans over 100 acres and is surrounded by lush green landscaping, water fountains, and an ecopark.
- The Path: As you tread the star-shaped path, you encounter pristine nature, devotional chants played softly across the expanse, and specific spots meant for quiet reflection before reaching the final threshold.

Main Deity and Subdeities

- Main Deity: The presiding deity of the golden sanctum is Sri Lakshmi Narayani (the goddess of wealth, prosperity, and auspiciousness), represented as an exquisitely carved, beautiful stone idol.
- Subdeities & Extensions: Just adjacent to the golden complex is the broader Sri Narayani Peedam premises, which houses shrines dedicated to Sri Swayambhu Narayani (a self-manifested stone deity discovered on the grounds), Lord Ganesha, and a dedicated enclosure for the Go Shala (sacred cow sanctuary). A massive 25-foot tall metallic statue of Sri Lakshmi Narayani is also installed near the entry plaza.

Daily Rituals and Poojas and Their Charges

Sri Lakshmi Narayani Golden Temple

Sri Lakshmi Narayani Golden Temple complex inside the Thirupuram spiritual park is nestled at the base of a small range of green hills at Thirumalaikodi (or simply Malaikodi) Vellore in Tamil Nadu, India. It is 120 km from Tirupati, 145 km from Chennai, 160 km from Pondicherry and 200 km from Bengaluru. The Maha Kumbhabhishekam or consecration of the temple and its chief deity, Lakshmi or Maha Lakshmi, the Hindu goddess of wealth, was held on 24 August 2007, and devotees from all religions and backgrounds are welcome to visit.

Background

The salient feature of 'Thirupuram' is the Lakshmi Narayani temple whose Vimanam and Ardha Mandapam is covered with pure gold, housing the deity Sri Lakshmi Narayani (female consort/wife of Vishnu Narayana). The temple is located on 40 hectares (100 acres) of land and has been constructed by the Vellore-based charitable trust, Sri Narayani Peedam, headed by its spiritual leader Sri Sakthi Amma also known as 'Narayani Amma'.

Design

The temple with its gold covering, has intricate work done by artisans specialising in temple art using gold. Every single detail was manually created, including converting the gold bars into gold foils and then mounting the foils on copper. Gold foil from 9 layers to 10 layers has been mounted on the etched copper plates. Every single detail in the temple art has significance from the Vedas.[1]

Sripuram's design features a star-shaped path (Sri chakra), positioned in the middle of the lush green landscape, with a length of over 1.8 km. As one walks along this 'starpath' to reach the temple in the middle, one can also read various spiritual messages—such as the gift of the human birth itself, and the value of spirituality—along the way.

Hospital

The Sri Narayani Hospital & Research Centre is a general hospital located near the Thirupuram temple complex and is also run by the 'Sri Narayani Peedam' Charitable Trust.
